GETTING BIG SEINE READY. Preparations at Chapman's Shore for

Coming of Shad and Herring.

A portion of the crew that will operate the haul seine at Chapman's shore, Md., a short distance above Glynont, has been at the shore for several days making ready to put the big seine overboard. It will require about a week to put things in shape for work at Chapman's, but by the time the shad and herring get into the Potomac the net will be ready and the hauling of it started.

ing to Capt. Will Neltzey of this city, located on the Virginia side of the river a short distance below Mount Vernon, will not be operated this year, and many of the men who were formerly many of the men who were formerly employed there will this season go to Chapman's shore.

Capt J. D. Faunce, who has been operating winter seine at the Gums, Va., determined to take no chances with shad and herring and has cut out for the season. It is stated that the Gums had a fairly successful winter season and while considerable quantities of fish were sent to the market here large quantities were sent to the market here large quantities were sent to Fhiladelphia, New York and the big markets in the north.

She felt that she had never looked better in her Hig.

It is true all things conspired to flatter her. The large bedroom faced the south, and the Hight was discreetly tempered by carefully adjusted shades and curtains. had filled his stomach and burned his tongue in the sugar house of Farmer Brown. Now his stomach was once more empty and his tongue—well, his tongue was sore, but it wasn't nearly as sore as it had been. His stomach whispered, "Go get some more sugar tonight." His tongue whispered, "Keep away from there. You got in trouble before, so keep away."

Buster was inclined to listen to his tongue, though he would have much rather listened to his stomach. He wouldn't go near that sugar house. But after it grew dark his stomach whispered louder than ever, "It won't do any harm to go over that way and just see what is going on," said he to him to scare Buster and at the same time take his picture. Then the terrible flash had been set off to scare Buster and at the same time take his picture. Then the terrible gun had been fired, not at Buster, but the fighth ing in a thunder storm. Then the bang't bang' ba for a terrible gun. Buster fell right over backward. Then he scrambled to his feet and ran. How he ran! He didn't look to see where he was going, but bumped into trees and scrambled through bushes, the worst scared bear ever seen. And as he ran he heard the yells of Farmer Brown himself and they frightened him still more.

When they could no longer hear the sound of Buster crashing through the brush Farmer Brown and his boy sat down and laughed. You see, that terrible flash had been set off to scare Buster and at the same time take his picture. Then the terrible gun had been fired, not at Buster, but "It wasn't a question of numbers," said W. P. Bowie, "but it was distinctly one of size. Adams had only three fish. One weighed four pounds, another four and a quarter pounds and the third tipped the scales at five and a quarter pounds—some fish."

Samuel De Binder and Dr. Randall Parsons were on the job at Fletcher's for a week-end outing. Both are enthusiastic anglers, who seldom miss an opportunity to get out. Last year both sportsmen experienced splendid luck, and this season they have caught many Mississippi catfish. Their real enjoyment will come when white perch and rockfish appear. De Binder caught ten fish on his last outing, while Dr. Parsons had a string of ten to his credit. norning without success.

William Hunter had an interesting outing at Lock cove on a week-end outing. He caught a dozen Mississippi catfish.

Anglers who are spending their spare time at Eastern branch are enjoying the sport of catching channel catfish. Many such fish are being caught in the warm water near Benning bridge, and the anglers manage to land an occasional mullet.

Sportsmen are anticipating a run of white perch as soon as the weather gets warmer. The perch already are here, says Will Reynolds, and all that is necessary to start them biting is warmer water.
